

New McCormick X7.680 tractor has single kiddie power and twin pedal transmission

Farmers, contractors and tractor drivers who want to get their children on a McCormick at the earliest opportunity can now add a new version of the X7.680 Pro Drive to their fleet.

While the full-size machine has a semi-powershift transmission and a six-cylinder engine with up to 212hp for tackling powered cultivations work and road haulage, the new addition has 'single kiddie' power and a variable speed transmission – the rider's legs working the pedals!

In other respects, the new Falk ride-on model designed for three- to seven-year-olds is a remarkably authentic reproduction of the real tractor. The new-look styling of the modern McCormick is faithfully reproduced in the hood shape and decals, while the distinctive triple work light clusters of the full-size McCormick's Premiere cab are represented on the front of the model's roll bar.

Nicely executed mouldings on the dark grey chassis represent the engine and ancillaries, and a full set of ballast weights is evident beneath the silver grille.

The pedal tractor comes as standard with a two-wheel trailer for transporting light items and there is also a 'handling' version with the trailer and a double-handled loader with tipping bucket.

For classic tractor enthusiasts, the McCormick pedal tractor range also includes an XTX215 with optional trailer and loader, as well as a G-Max walk along model for children aged up to 4 years old.

All are available from McCormick dealer stocks or to order.
